Siri and Cortana

Siri was the only talking phone in town. She loved talking to her best friend, Kik while she sent messages. Then one day a new phone named Nokia came with her best friend, Cortana. Cortana and Nokia got all the attention. Kik and Siri were sad because all of their friends had run off to have a Candy Crush competition with Nokia, Cortana, Facebook, and Twitter. Kik and Siri did not know who Nokia and Cortana were. So they went to the competition. They tried being friends with Facebook but all he wanted to do was post happy and sad faces. They tried being friends with Twitter but she instantly typed, "No" fifteen times and would have said No more but she could use only thirty characters. So rude! Then they went to Google but she just kept blurting out one fact after another. When the Candy Crush awards were announced, Siri and Cortana tied. Cortana and Siri realized what they had in common. They both helped people get their things done by giving them voice reminders and help. Cortana felt bad for leaving Siri out, so she asked her to come play with Kik. Then they invited the other technology to join them. Candy Crush is supposed to be fun! They all played Candy Crush into the night.
